STEAMPUNK MODELS

Steampunk –
It's awesome, unique, quirky, stunning and unusually fascinating. Steampunk is a subgenre of science fiction where a world of fantasy meets science, incorporated by the technology of steam-powered machinery and combined with the 19th century British Victorian era.

The background story...

So this is the new world; a world of mad science, Eco warriors beneath the waves and empiric wars. The three mast clippers are now too slow to get their precious cargo past the devastating submersibles of those that despise empires, whilst the horse and cart falls constant prey to the hungry lizards that slip through the streams. The tea must get through though, the world demands it.

Wenman Joseph Bassett-Lowke is one of those concerned; a seasoned maker of steam boilers, industrial brewing equipment and proud owner of some of the finest aromatic tea plantations across the world. That precious crop had to be delivered; he needed a fast, reliable solution and when you know a thing or two about steam power you know just the mavericks for the job. Foreman, Cornelius Chuddery, rounds up his team of skilled train jockeys - they have the nerve and they have the engines. With lucrative bounties on the line for getting the goods in first, the task of getting the tea across the new world is back on. The clippers had been good for their time but now the world needs trains and fast ones!

Boston Grey is the sort of man who knows how to inspire the lords and ladies; with a rakish smile and top hat to match, he and his bright young things would make a party of getting the tea through.

Fuelled with lashing of aristocratic madness their tea party could win every race and have fun being bounders as they sabotage the efforts of their rivals. They call themselves 'The Hatters'.

Rosie Rivette is a wartime factory foreman, stood proudly alongside her sisterhood; they are embracing change and are damsels in distress no more. By repurposing the great diesel machines they had silently built, run and maintained (as the men folk fought in the many wars) they will prove the not so fairer sex were the gals for the job. Emblazoning their engines with the art of empowered women they took to the rails as the 'Diesel Dames'.

Adder Stone has a keen sense of adventure and he knows across the back yards of the empire the true heroes labour in their outbuildings. They are the real inventors, with a make do and mend attitude and if anyone deserves the rich bounties for getting the tea through, it is the unsung back yard grafters. Salvaging all they can from wherever they can; they built engines from their hoards of scrap and stitched them together with blood and spit to become the 'Coop Commandoes'.

Build an imaginative world of innovative trains as they race the precious cargoes of Wenman Joseph Bassett-Lowke across a perilous Steampunk landscape.

Who will win the race?

Tea, Tea and more Tea... On the move and in bulk!

Bassett-Lowke had the ingenious idea to put his tea factories on the rails.

Why waste time drying and mixing the leaves at the plantations when it can be done just as safely on the move - well as safely as highly pressured boilers, threshing blades and drying ovens can be at speed!

'Leander' Adder Stone's Coop Commandoes Engine

Made from old rolling stock and whatever may have been laying about, never mind the exterior the true genius of these engines lies within. Every inch is unique and engineered to perfection so that she runs like a dream and punches like a pugilist. If bits on the outside can't hold up to the strains they can simply be replaced or remoulded. Like the family broom it's only had three new head gaskets and two new dead man's handles.

'Fearless' Boston Grey's Hatters Engine

Designed with speed in mind over pulling power, the sleek curves and classic fittings were the brain child of Boston Grey himself. He said the idea came to him during the revelries of a particularly fun party. It was the chic engine to have and if Boston had one, his chums would have one too (of course all subtly augmented and painted to the desires of its owner).

BL6003 Dinosaur Hatchery Wagon

BL2003

'Rogue' Lady Triphenia Lovelace's Diesel Dames Engine

Designed by committee as a slow moving armoured vehicle, to get troops and armaments to the front line battle with the Martian Invaders. The Diesel Dames bought stocks and invested in a few of their own; repurposing them to run on rails (as had always been suggested) they increased their speed without damaging their pulling power. The rogue clearly is the brute able to smash through barriers and still take a heavy load.

STEAMPUNK LOCOMOTIVES & ROLLING STOCK

SteamPunk – it's awesome, unique, quirky, stunning and unusually fascinating.

BL8001

'Basset-Lowke's Tea & Urn Factory'

The humble building where the Basset-Lowke blended teas and industrial urns start their lives; tea bush leaves are brought in from the plantations before being dried and blended on site. They are then put in foil-lined wooden crates and shipped around the world by the train Jockeys; the fastest team win the contract for that year.

'Time Travel Holiday Homes'

Who doesn't want a holiday in history?

Maybe you just want to visit the countryside before it was overrun by red weed or you have invites to an ancestors wedding; perhaps you have a hankering for a roman gladiatorial weekend or a Neolithic shin dig.

Then Time Travel holiday homes are for you and surprisingly spacious on the inside, with room for all the family. Step inside, set your destination and holiday in the time period of your choice.

(Please remember to turn off portals on leaving the cottage as time leakage can cause countrywide anomalies).

BL8005

'The Dinosaur Stud Farms'

Since the arrival of both rogue Cretaceous creatures (dinosaurs that slip through the open time stream) and the eco warriors, plantation owners have had to protect their crops from scavengers (dinosaurs go crazy for the tannins in tea).

This protection is done by breeding and keeping tyrannosaurus rexes and feeding them red meat and fresh tea leaves from birth. The tea makes them tame enough to ride or even just let wander on your premises. Dubbed Tea-Rex, this modern breed of dinosaur is a plantation owners best ally against tea thieves be they Cretaceous or just opportunistic humans.

BL8006

'Indicator Box'

BL8003

'The Fogg Checkpoint Bridge'

Every key stage of the tea routes are marked by the Fogg Bridges. On passing beneath the bridge a bell is rung and the time of the section is logged and relayed back to the Basset-Lowke factory. Once a complete route is finished all sections are totalled and the fastest train wins the contract.
